What might have been more serious, occurred at the S. P. station yesterday afternoon. A single car of coal near the shops got away, coming dowr the main track at a pretty good speed. A brake-man boarded the car and set the brake so tight as to break the chain, making matters worse than before. Another brakeman tried to set a switch for the car to run off from, but the car passed him to soon. An engine was on the engineer saw it coming he pulled out at a lively speed and gradually let the car overtake the engine and stopped it. Several witnesses were up to prove that she had changed the money, in different places. After getting the money she had a regular jamboree, hiring a hack to take her out to Silver Lake and raising Cain generally. Omens in a Loaf of Bread. Among beliefs current with sailors s the notion that it is unlucky to turn loaf upside down after helping one's self from it; the idea being that for very loaf so turned a ship will be wrecked. It is also said that if a loaf parts in the hand while being cut it bodes dissension in the family—the separation of husband and wife. Again, it has been a widespread belief that the whereabouts of a drowned body may be ascertained by floating a loaf of bread down stream, when it will stop over the spot where the body

's. A curious account of a body thus ecovered near Hull, England, ap-peared some years back in The Gentle man's Magazine: After diligent search had been made in the river for the child, to no purpose, a two-penny loaf, with a quantity of quicksilver in it, was set floating from the place where the child was supposed to have fallen in, which steered its way down river upward of half a mile, when the body happening to lie on the contrary side of the river, the loaf suddenly tacked about and swam across the river, and gradually sank near the child, when both the child and the loaf were brought up with grapplers ready for the purpose. tes maintains that it is a scientific fact that a loaf and quicksilver indicates the position of the body, as the weighted loaf is carried by the current just as the body is. This practice, too, premany the name of the drowned per son is inscribed on the piece of bread; while in France loaves consecrated to St. Nicholas, with lighted wax tapers in them, have generally been employed for that purpose.-Waverley Maga-

Exercise for Chest Developmen Exercises of strength lead rapidly to an increase in the size of the thorax. It is the same with exercises of speed when they need very energetic move-ments. No exercise develops the chest as rapidly as does running, unless it be wrestling. Mountaineers all have large chests, and the Indians who live on the high plateaus of the Cordillera in the Andes have been noted for the extraordinary size of their chests. This great development in mountaineers is due to two causes, which act in the same direc tion: frequent ascent of steep inclines, and constant residence at great heights at which the air is rarefied. The climbing of these slopes needs a great quantity of work, which causes increase of the respiratory need; respiration in a rarefied atmosphere obliges a man to take deeper breaths in order to supplement, by the quantity of air breathed, the insufficiency of its vivi fying properties.

Singers, with no other exercise but singing, acquire great respiratory power and a remarkable increase in the dimensions of the chests.

Numerous observations prove that it is enough voluntarily to take a cer ain number of deep breaths every day, to produce, in a short time, an increase in the circumference of the shest which may amount to two or aree centimeters .- Fernand Lagrange, M. D., in Popular Science Monthly.
